Eagle Project I wrote, directed, filmed and produced a live-action educational video for first and second graders to reinforce good behavior and adherence to the rules in the school library. Young children often forget rules that are in place to promote a quiet, safe, orderly atmosphere and to ensure every child's ability to use the library to the maximum extent possible. The video I produced will offer the librarian another medium to teach young students the library rules. She can also provide the video to first and second grade teachers to use in their classrooms before the children come to library, which will save the librarian time.

Future Ambitions: I am passionate about the creative side of advertising. Ever since I first watched the timeless "I'd Like to Buy the World a Coke" ad, I've known that I've wanted to dive into the chaos, creativity, and freedom of the industry. I will be attending college next year, majoring in communication, marketing or advertising. I'd like to start a student-run ad firm in college, then earn a graduate degree in creative advertising work in the field.
